FCRA COMPLIANCE and ACCURACY

1.1 FCRA COMPLIANCE. Customer is responsible for its compliance with the FCRA, as well as any applicable state and local consumer reporting laws. Without in any way limiting the foregoing:

- (a) Customer shall request Consumer Reports from Company for a permissible purpose for obtaining Consumer Reports as defined by FCRA §604 and applicable state and local law.
- (b) Prior to requesting a Consumer Report, Customer shall identify the permissible purpose under FCRA §604 and applicable state and local law for which the Consumer Report (or information from such report) is to be furnished; and certify that the Consumer Report shall be used for no other purpose.
- (c) Customer shall establish and comply with reasonable procedures designed to ensure that each Consumer Report (or information from such report) is used only for a purpose for which the report may be furnished under FCRA §604 and applicable state and local law, including providing the information and certifications required by FCRA §607(a) and applicable state and local law including identifying the nature of the Customer's business, certifying the Customer's permissible purpose(s) for obtaining Consumer Reports, and agreeing that such Consumer Reports shall be used for no other purpose. In the event that a Consumer Report is obtained for employment purposes, Customer shall provide the certifications required by FCRA § 604(b) and applicable state and local law.
- (d) Customer may archive, maintain or use Consumer Reports for audit and disaster recovery purposes, as well as complying with Customer's obligations under the FCRA, similar state laws or other applicable law.
